Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 05 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Becoming hotter early this week, especially England and Wales.

Today:
Early cloud thinning and breaking to leave most areas warm and dry with sunny spells. Cloudier over western Scotland and parts of Northern Ireland where spells of rain developing this afternoon.

Tonight:
Early evening cloud and outbreaks of rain over western Scotland and Northern Ireland spreading eastwards into the rest of Scotland and northern England. Further south, dry with clear spells.

Monday:
Much of Scotland, northern England and Northern Ireland rather cloudy with showery rain in places, perhaps more especially Yorkshire and Lincolnshire. Further south, dry with warm sunny periods.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Very warm with sunny spells Tuesday. Similar Wednesday, but with some heavy showers spreading to southwestern areas. Showers becoming more widespread Thursday, locally heavy in the northwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.